Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurThis is a light-hearted story set in an Andalucian hill-village. Agnes, a mathematics teacher with some curious and useful abilities takes a holiday in Spain and meets a breeder of horses who asks her to marry him. She abandons her job and her father and the UK and comes to live in an Andalucian hill-village. She, her husband and her mother-in-law (who shares those curious and useful abilities) defend the village where they live from the schemes of a go-ahead Mayoress who wishes to profit from tourism and ruin the village in the process. They are helped in this by a number of villagers both Spanish and foreign, as well as by the animals who are as individual as the villagers themselves. It is a book which will appeal in particular to those who have visited Spain or have lived there or who may still be living there. Prsentation de l'diteur This is a light-hearted story set in an Andalucian hill-village.
