Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurLee Langley's bewitching story of lost hope and thwarted love opens where Puccini's opera ends; with Madame Butterfly - Cho-Cho-San - handing over her beloved son to his American father before killing herself. In America Joey grows up torn between two cultures, haunted, like his parents, by their memories of what really happened on that fateful day. But just as Joey's fate is inextricably linked with the country of his birth, so too is the fate of America, and both of their paths will ultimately lead to Nagasaki.Revue de presse"Langley's detailed descriptions of war blaze with brilliance" (Arifa Akbar Independent)"A compelling portrait of a man in search of his lost self" (Nick Rennison Sunday Times)"Beautifully written and vividly imagined, this is an impressive achievement" (Jessica Mann Literary )"Lee Langley's big, ambitious new novel is a riveting read... and a deeply moving human story" (Deborah Moggach)"A lovely novel... fragile and beautiful and so finely wrought" (Ruth Padel)Prsentation de l'diteurLee Langley's bewitching story of lost hope and thwarted love opens where Puccini's opera ends; with Madame Butterfly - Cho-Cho-San - handing over her beloved son to his American father before killing herself.
