Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurTwo sisters were, as children, abused by their parents. One sexually by her father and subsequently runs away from home eventually emigrating to Canada.The younger daughter, remained to look after both ailing parents. She was subjected to verbal abuse and general bullying by her mother.From the death of her father she learns to take increasing control of the situation over her mother; particularly due to her declining ill health and subsequent dependency for care by her daughter.Her sense of isolation and depression at facing a vacant future, prompts her to realise her only escape to a better life is to dispose of her mother, bury her past and begin a normal life. She plots to engineer the death of her mother.Does she succeed or has she made a mistake which thwarts its eventual conclusion?During the funeral of their mother and after in their own company, they relive their past experiences to each other with intimate detail and deep emotional feelings of hurt, hate and revenge.The book is controversial, contentious, highly emotionally charged, with twists and turns to leave you debating for the answer long after you've read it.Contains strong language and graphic descriptions. For adult reading only.Prsentation de l'diteurTwo sisters were, as
