Description :

Prsentation de l'diteur
In our society rife with family breakdown, it becomes routine to accept its inevitability. Anne Mueller, a middle-aged widow, eight years estranged from her only daughter, Samantha, does just that, until a thirteen-year-old neighbor on the run, Sarah Mackle, nicknamed Little Bit, appears on her doorstep. With Sarah's inclusion in Anne's life, all the fears and hurt Anne buried and denied now surface, and impel her to ask one simple question: What is it we do that drives our children from us? The series of events that question sets in motion are unforeseen. Against the backdrop of the wilderness of northwestern Alberta in which Annes small community is located, an adventure story unfolds that involves a harrowing episode in the great Boreal forest; the aid and wisdom of Annes Cree native friends, and the love of a man whos been waiting 15 years for Annes attention. Thought provoking and brimming with wildness, this story creates a world the reader is reluctant to leave. Presentation de l'auteur In our society rife with family breakdown, it becomes routine to accept its inevitability. the backdrop of the wilderness of northwestern Alberta in which Anne's small community is located, an adventure story unfolds that involves a harrowing episode in the great Boreal forest; the aid and wisdom of Anne's Cree native friends, and the love of a man who's been waiting 15 years for Anne's attention. Thought provoking and brimming with wildness, this story creates a world the reader is reluctant to leave. Biographie de l'auteur Christina Carson (1946 - ) I was born in Chester County, Pennsylvania when it still looked like the verdant farming country of England. Horses and dairy farming were prominent, and I chose horses.

Educated as a scientist, I was a child of the 1960s, and one of the outcomes of that was my stance as war protester. Leaving a PhD. program and America in 1968, I settled in western Canada and fell in love with the wildness of the country and the tolerance of the people. The cold was a tad stunning, however. I've been writing nonfiction and poetry as long as I can remember, but eight years ago I began to write fiction. In 1996, I came back to the States on the arm of a Vietnam veteran. Now there's a story for you. Presently, I reside in Alabama with my husband, also a writer. Neither the adventure of life, its wonder, nor what it has yet to teach me seem anywhere close to an end.
